

NO DRONES

Louise Lawler

Con No Drones, l'artista continua la sua complessa indagine sulle funzioni che l'opera d'arte assume nei contesti in cui viene presentata.

Il forte rigore della composizione e l'equilibrio delle forme, caratteristico delle sue fotografie, emergono ancora più chiaramente in questi ultimi lavori dove la struttura diventa protagonista dell'immagine.

Private del colore e ingrandite di formato in modo da adattarsi allo spazio, le nuove immagini che Louise Lawler ci presenta sono una dimostrazione di quanto possano ancora essere aperte e innovative le modalità di indagine dell'immagine contemporanea.

Le due sale principali della galleria ospitano delle immagini in bianco e nero stampate su vinile e incollate direttamente sulle pareti dello spazio espositivo. I traced works non sono altro che gli outline delle immagini più celebri dell'artista: opere d'arte fotografate nei musei, nelle collezioni private, nelle case d'asta e nei depositi. Per produrre questi lavori Louise Lawler ha lavorato in collaborazione con l'autore di libri per bambini, illustratore e artista Jon Buller con il quale sono state reinterpretate molte delle fotografie più famose dell'artista americana.

In mostra saranno presenti anche alcune opere uniche colorate a mano da Louise Lawler.

Louise Lawler è nata nel 1947 a Bronxville (New York). Vive e lavora a New York.

Ha partecipato ad importanti mostre collettive come "The Picture Generation: 1974 – 1984", al Metropolitan Museum of Art, Documenta 12 e a tre Biennali di Whitney. Tra le mostre personali: Museum Ludwig, Colonia; Albertinum, Dresda; Wexner Center for the Arts, Columbus, Ohio; Dia: Beacon, New York; Hirschhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, Washington DC; Museum für Gegenwartskunst, Basilea; e Portikus, Francoforte. NO DRONES
Louise Lawler

The artist continues her complex research on the work of art functions in its own environment. Lawler's pictures of artworks installed in private collectors houses, museums and storage exemplifies the importance of the contextual component for the mimetic structure of an artwork. Our attention is deviated from the artwork to its environment opening up our understanding of the art institution.

In "No Drones" Louise Lawler shows a selection of works from her latest series: in the main gallery's rooms black lining, tracing existing photographs of Lawler are executed in vinyl and directly applied to the wall. These traced works were conceived together with children's book author, illustrator and artist Jon Buller. The artist revisits older pictures as a sort of appropriation of her own work. The tracing exist as a digital file that can be printed and reprinted on any format, depending the size of the wall on which it will be applied.

The relation of these works with the exhibition space illustrates the artist's continuous reflection on art and its structures and how innovative the research on contemporary photography could already be.

This exhibition will present also some unique works on paper, hand coloured by Louise Lawler.
